FRIDAY AUGUST 18, 1893,

The Convention and Its Work. The State Democratic Convention entered upon its work yesterday with great heartiness and industry. From the first fall of the gavel to the hour of adjournment progress was the wish and the demand of the members. The discomforts of an unusually sultry day spurred them on not less than their patriotic purpose to do their business promptly. The absence of State-Chairman Goadon by reason of sickness was noted with regret. The State Committee had, however, made provision to fill his place by designating Mr. ELLISON to call the convention to order, and that gentleman performe he duty with a brief statement of these facts. It was a tempting opportunity to make a speech-an opportunity few Virginians could have resisted-but Mr. Elrsox triumphed over the temptation and at once introduced as the temporary chairman Mr. Bevenner B. Munfond. As was expected of him. Mr. Muxrosp spoke, and spoke well. What he said was not only appropriate to the occasion, but will prove to be the key-note of the coming canvass. Next the usual committees were appointed and the convention took a re-

It must have been known to experienced politicians that it was extremely unlikely that the committees would be ready to report in the short time allotted them. Two out of the three were still sitting when the convention reconvened. Whiist waiting for their reports an oratorical season was indulged in from 4 to 6 o'clock. Our people are never satisfied to return to their homes from a State convention withont having heard their "big men." No convention would be voted a success where this privilege was denied the delegates Hence the two hours utilized for this purposa yesterday afternoon were by no means wasted. Quite the contrary. It was a feast of eloquence which prepared the way for the consideration of platform addressed to the practical sense of the convention. General Frez Lan was the first speaker. He was followed by Governor McKinney. Then came Senator JOHN W. DANIEL and Messrs. JOHN GOODE, JOHN E. MASSEY. In the way of ovations, those which were accorded to DANIEL and

A long and useful public career, of the State, and personal magnetism of popular favorite and will give him great strength at the polls in November. In common with all good Democrats of this State, the Disparch is prepared to give him its hearty and unflagging support. Of his election we feel sure, but no surer than that he will make an admirable on this subject—strange, if for no other reason, because they are the most strenum in public affairs, industry, and ambition in public affairs, industry, and ambition of the Company for them. to promote the best interests of the Com-monwealth, and with all these qualities can hardly fail of success as Governor Mc-KINNEY'S SUCCESSOR

He is a man of fine personal appearance and dignified bearing, and will preside over the Senate most acceptably.

After speeches from the successful and unsuccessful candidates both, the ticket was completed by the renomination of Attorney-General R. TAYLOR SCOTT. The contest was animated, but, like that for the governorship, was conducted in good spirit, and was won by the present incumbent largely upon the excellent record he has made in office.

Thus we have for our trio of leaders O'FERRALL, KEST, and Scott-a ticket presenting many elements of strength and well entitled to be called "a winner."

It was a good deal after 2 o'clock this morning when the report of the Committee on Resolutions was presented. The convention was then "thin" and ex hausted by its long session. Only one expression was hatened for with particular interest-that in relation to currency This was found to be chiefly a reiteration of the Chicago platform and a demand for an expansion of the currency. This ended the work of the convention. of which we can truly say "well and quickly done."

The Depositors' Panic-Senator Vance, of North Carolina, said not long ago that the existing panie was "a rich man's panie." He would have me nearer to the mark if he had said that it was a depositors' panie. All mone-tary panies are occasioned by a want of confidence on the part of the depositors which their money is deposited. Their aiarm induces them to withdraw their money from the banks and hide it away. where they can at all times lay their hands upon it. So currency must not only be good, but it must be known to be good, and for this reason small banks located in towns and villages can never be relied upon to furnish a useful currency, nor one that will be acceptable in the financial centres. It is had enough for the bankers not to be able to march forward, but it is deplorable that they should turn their faces away from the sun and begin a backward march.

But is it true that there is no method in thing perfecting our currence? Is our national banking system to be accepted as the perfection of schemes for the handing by banks of the people's money? Can it be true that that system lacks but one thing to render it perfect, and yet the ablest of financiers cannot devise that one thing? As we have often said before, it is indispensable to the success of any system of banking that the public should have confidence in it. Cosfidence is as important as roivency. A bank must not only be good, but it turns that that system be known to be good.

SMITHFIELD. Just below Mansfield, on the same side of the river, is Smithfield, a large and handsome residence built by Mr. John nesday why this belated proposition would not be accepted by the friends of free coinage. Mr. Smirm is handicapped by the fact that he is in Mr. CLEVELAND'S gabinet. If it be true that Mr. CLEVELAND would sign a bill providing for the free coinage of silver 20 to 1, then he must be prepared to surrender the proposition upon which all surrender the proposition upon which all the goldolators have hitherto stood that silver and gold cannot be kept at a parity by congressional legislation unless the ratio of coincige be changed from day to day to meet the rise and fall in the price of the silver bullion.

This would be a wonderful concession for Mr. Cleviland to make, and we do not believe that he has agreed to make it. It is not at all likely that even if he had changed his opinion on the silver question.

On the same side of the river and not far below is the farm once owned by Mr. Thomas Seddon, the brother of the Secre-Thomas Seddon, the brother of the Secretary of War. This house was burned in the late war by Federal troops in retaliation for Blaine's house that General Early burned in Maryland. Just below Hayfield, in Caroline, was Moss Neck, the former residence of James Parke Corbin. This beautiful house was the headquarters of Stonewall Jackson in the winter of 1863. This residence was subsequently destroyed by fire. Mr. Corbin was at one time one of the wealthiest men in Virginia, owning large numbers of slaves and much landed estate. A few miles below, near the river, is the famous Rappahannock Academy, at which nearly all the sons of the prominent families in this community were educated. The building once used was an old colonial church, but was confiscated by the government after the Revolutionary war and applied to the public-school purposes. Here General Mahone taught about forty years ago. This building was destroyed many years ago by fire. In the ground here are the graves of many of the old colonial people. The tombstones have long since disappeared, and this spot, once made sacred by the presence of a church, is now used for farming purposes.

Below this, in the same county, on the Beautifulty situated on the opposite side of the river, in King George county, is the fine old colonial residence once the property of Landon Carter, a descendant of King Carter. The place was called "Cleve" and is said to have been built by King Carter. Its style is very quaint and suggests great autiquity. It is built of brick and is very massive. It is now owned by Mr. Henry Byrd Lewis, a descendant of the distinguished Washington and Lewis families of Virginia. Just below "Cleve" is "Mill Bank," which was built in 1725 by Mr. Jame Skinker and was the home of the Fitzhughs, and is now owned by Mr. E. J. Smith. THE CLEVE MANSION.

The beat stops at the Port-Conway wharf, and we are reminded that it was here that President Madison was born, in the house of Mr. Conway, who was Mrs. Madison's father. It is said in this family there was an indented white servant, who taught President Madison and the Conway boys when they were children, and that she predicted that the Conway boys would be bright men, but said Madison was too stupid ever to do much in this world.

Just below Post Conway is the old Turner estate where once stood the "Washington" house. This farm is a part of the large tract of land which has been in the possession of this family since the seventeenth century. It was first owned by a Dr. Turner, who settled on the Rappahannock about 1650. This land is still held by the descendants of this pioneer. Just below, in the same county, not far from the river, is "Woodlawn," where resides Mr. Henry Turner, one of the most energetic and successful farmers on the river, who is still in the vigor of middle life and retains his ancestral love of country life and pursuits.

Just opposite to Port Conway, in Caroline county, is Port Royal. This was once a flourishing town. During revolutionary dars it came in one vote of being chosen as the capitol of the newly-organized Union, Philadelphia being the successful chica. Fritadelphia being the successful rival. In those days it was an importing city, vessels coming and going to foreign countries brought great prosperity to the place. The Washingtons, the Faundieroys, the Grimeses, the Fitzbughs, the Turners, the Boytons, the Ashtons, and many other old and distinguished families used to come here from the Northern Neck and

Mr. Huntok has already introduced a bill into the United States Senate making provision for a tax upon deposits to be used in rendering deposits as safe and secure as circulating notes. We have not seen Mr. Huntok's bill, and cannot describe its features; but the object of it is as we have just stated. WOODWARD LOTHROP.

TEMPLE DRY-GOODS STORE CORNER BROAD AND ADAMS STREETS. REMNANT DAY.

FRIDAY.

It is recognized as the economical shopping-day. It assists in reducing your necessary expenses. The benefit you derive is in proportion to the extent of your needs and you get, perhaps, the article you want for about one half its worth. In deliars and cents we lose, but we accomplish our purpose and are satisfied.

Each week's business must take care of itself; therefore, not only all "short lengths," but "cid and extreme sizes," broken lots, "cuts of lines," selled, mussed, or defaced goods of every character are set apart for Friday, when they are sold regardless of value. Don't confine yourself to what you see, but ask at any counter, you'll surely flud something useful.
